

MY HERO ACADEMIA

Boku no (my) Hero Academia is an anime (Japanese animated TV series) in a world where 90% of people have powers of some sort. The world is flooded with heroes. Midoriya was born “quirkless” (powerless) which leads him to get bullied even in elementary. Since he was quirkless he was a huge fan of heroes, especially the strongest hero: All Might. Boku no Hero Academia utilizes intense, emotional drawing, captivating music, and relatable character behaviours to emphasize the theme that anything can happen.

Boku no hero academia uses intense, emotional drawing to convey the strong morale that anything is possible. The emotions are shown through close ups of characters crying, laughing, or showing emotions that are supposed to spark emotional attachment with the viewer. In the beginning of boku no hero academia, Midoriya met his hero; All might. When all might saw Midoriya and how much hope he had to become a hero, he was inspired and gave Midoriya his quirk which left many viewers emotional along with midoriya. Words as simple as “You can be a hero” choked up many viewers just because of the intense, close up drawings that were paired with the words.

The music in Boku no hero academia brings life to the drawings and gets the viewer on the edge of their seat to see what is possible in the superpower world. The powerful music helps the viewer understand the situation. In fight scenes the music brings every movement to life more than 3D every could. The music makes the viewer's adrenaline running, and when the viewer hears the fight scene track starting up, their face lights up with a smile. The music alone gives the viewer a deeper understanding of the characters, plot, and scene. Boku no hero academia has one of the most lively OST (original soundtracks) of anime history.

Relating to any form of entertainment is what really makes the viewer or reader stick around. When the viewer sees someone who they can relate to, whether it's exaggerated or not, it is intriguing. The viewer is compelled to learn more about the character's personality and traits. There is no shortage of relatable characters in Boku no hero academia. Whether you feel a commonality to the main character, or a character meaningless to the plotline. Having an understanding of any character in particular helps you understand the morale of the anime that anything can happen.

When emotional drawing, intense music, and relatable characters mix it creates a masterpiece that even someone who despises anime can enjoy. The voice acting in Boku no hero academia is great, it brings the character's individual feelings to life. I strongly encourage everyone I know to watch Boku no hero academia as it is my favorite anime currently. Seeing someone rise up from the ground to the best superhero is inspirational, even if it isn't real. The anime makes the viewer believe anything is possible.
